Part II: The Evaluative Report

A. Executive Summary

1. Foundation of London Missionary Society

On 22nd September, 1795, The London Missionary Society was established. Rev. David Bogue took remarkable role in establishing this society. He was Gosport's D.D. (Doctor of Divinity). Except the Baptist Missionaries, the organization that dedicated itself in spreading education in Bengal before 1813- was the London Missionary Society.

In 1933, the National Christian Council conducted a survey for the Christian High Schools of India. Miss Van Doren, in the report of the survey of Christian High Schools of India stressed the importance of Teachers' Training of Christian Schools. According to her report, discussion was continued between Bengal and London from 1934 to 1936 and the Bengal Committee realized the importance of Secondary Teachers' Training of Christian Schools as well as General Schools. After that the Bengal Committee wanted to know the opinion of different Christians Councils and Churches and requested them for co-operation. As a result, a meeting was held in the Edinburgh House of London in 1937 and the decision about giving a practical shape to Teachers' Training College was accepted. Then representatives of N.C.C. (National Christian Council) came to Berhampore for selecting a suitable place. Dr. Otto Henry Strusburg was nominated with the charge of L.M.S. Berhampore Section. He was a German and was awarded Ph.D. degree from Berlin University. Moreover, he had a profound knowledge of Engineering. He took the chance of establishing a college in Berhampore and he applied for establishing the college to L.M.S. and the Bengal Committee accepted the proposal of establishing a college at Berhampore in the District of Murshidabad, West Bengal.

2. Aims and Objectives

The main aim of establishing this college was to train the teachers of the Secondary Schools. But in order to satisfy the dire necessity, stress was given on the training of Graduates rather than Post Graduates and this college was established as a Higher Grade Normal School. The Societies and Churches felt the urgent need of trained teachers in Secondary Schools in Bengal, but the facilities for training are not limited to students of any particular community. They opened the training for all communities for spreading out the development of trained teachers for Secondary Schools in rural areas.

3. Location of the College

The college was established in the Old Mission House at the Eastern Side of the Strand Road (at present Netaji Road) of the Berhampore town in 24°02' N and 88°21' E position. The main building originally was a "Resham Kuthi" at the time of East India Company. It was a two storied building, the 1st floor was used as a dwelling place and the ground floor was used as a go down by the Silk Merchants. In the latter half of the 19th century there were two famous silk companies in Berhampore. Among them one was a British Company and another was French. The structure and the inner decoration of the present building bears the proof of artistic sense and luxuriousness of the French. So it can be guessed that formerly the college was owned by the Bengal Silk Company which was later occupied by the London Missionary Society. In this building the new Secondary Teachers' Training College started.

4. Responsibility of Administration

The London Missionary Society accepted the responsibilities of College Building, Students' Hostel, and Principal's Quarter (with tax). The Baptist Missionary Society agreed to take the responsibility of the college and the Principal's salary and allowances on the condition of getting help from other missionary and Govt. sanction. At first six mission's viz. London Missionary Society, Methodist Missionary Society, Church of Scotland, Bengal Mission, American Baptist Bengal Orissa Mission unitedly established the college. Later Bengal Baptist Union joined with six Missions and the college was rechristened as Union Christian Training College on 8th March, 1938 and the new session was started from July, 1938. B.P.Ed. Course was started in this college in the year 1975.

In these programme student teachers plays the role of a teacher as well as of a student. While performing the role of a teacher, he teaches the students with the help of different teaching aids like charts, models, slide projectors etc. Then, the performance of each student teacher is discussed and feedback is given to improve his teaching process. In this way, the student teachers acquire the desirable skill in the artificial classroom. All faculty members try to develop PCK (pedagogic content knowledge) among the student teachers. Development of achievement test, pedagogic analysis of the content matter, lesson planning both micro and macro PCK is important. So teacher educators discuss and exchange opinion related to content with the student teachers and help them to make teacher constructed world for teaching.

Collective feedback is provided, individual problems are discussed and clarifications given. This helps the student teachers to know their weakness noted by supervisors and also to incorporate the suggestions for improvement in their subsequent lesson-delivery. Lesson plan note book is provided to each student teacher by the Institution and feedback format is printed in the note book at the end of every lesson plan as “supervisor’s note” title.
